PROSPECTS ARE GOOD TO OBTAIN FACTORY WITHIN SHORT TIME

Twenty-five Thousand Club Encouraged by Reports of Progress Made by Committee.

That Janesville can obtain a factory employing from seventy-five to one hundred hands, with a pay-roll of from six to seven thousand dollars a month and good prospects for growth, is the encouraging report made to the members of the Twenty-five Thousand Club at its meeting last evening by the members of the Factory Committee, Messrs. Frank Crook, F. E. Green, and H. L. McNamara. This concern, they stated, is entirely solvent, and in first class financial condition. It is established in a large city and manufactures springs for agricultural implements and furniture. One concern in this city is said to pay $100,000 a year for their product and they have many valuable standing contracts with firms in various parts of the country. The reason the firm desires to leave their present location is that it has no room to expand. It is housed in a three story building and has some very heavy machinery which should be on the ground floor on a floor over a basement. A $10,000 machine purchased could not be taken to the new place. The rent for the building is nearly $300 a month. There are no side tracks leading to the building and all the raw materials and finished product has to be conveyed to and from the building by team, at great expense.

It is the intention of the company to erect a factory building costing about $25,000 with the proceeds of the bond issue, the remainder to furnish additional capital for the purchase of a new line, pressed steel parts for agricultural implements. The company has exclusive patents on machinery for turning them out and there is a great demand for them, the manufacturers of malleable iron being unable to fill their orders. If the factory should be moved to Janesville the company would bring with it from thirty-five to forty of their most skilled workmen. The work would run from $2.25 a day to 50 cents an hour. Most of the work is piece work.

No action will be taken towards floating the proposed bond issue until an audit of the company's books, been received. This is expected here within the next few days. It is the intention of the committee to persuade local bankers and financiers to visit the factory. What is known thus far of the financial standing of the company is very satisfactory. It has furnished a financial statement and bank references, owes no money to the banks, has over $40,000 in collectible bills and considerable cash in the bank. The company has no stock for sale; in fact it recently turned down an offer to buy $30,000 worth of stock, and it asks no bonus or factory site. C. S. Jackman, asked as to the prospects of floating the bond issue, stated that he thought it would not be difficult in case of a local concern of determined good standing.

All efforts to obtain the first factory considered were given up. The committee has made the exorbitant demands made; $15,000 bonus and $10,000 for moving expenses. Subsequently the company demanded $30,000 in bonds and $3,000 moving expenses.

Considerable friendly discussion took place on the power of the Factory Committee to obligate the members of the club or incur liabilities for which they would be held responsible. It was made plain that the directors under the constitution had full power to take action without a referendum approval by the members, and also that as stockholders in the corporation they could not be liable for more than the extent of their stock holdings. On the motion of W. J. Cannon the members attending unanimously passed a vote of endorsement and confidence in the directors. James S. Smith acted as secretary in the absence of Secretary Van Buren, incapacitated and unable to be present. The attendance was very gratifying.

MOST ENTHUSIASTIC OVER THEIR OUTING

Veterans Who Journeyed to Gettysburg Returned Home Last Evening After Long Trip.

With nothing but words of praise for the manner in which they were treated both coming and going, and Gettysburg and their reception and accommodation at the famous battlefield reunion between the north and the south, the nine Janesville veterans of the Civil war who took part in the battle of Gettysburg fifty years ago arrived home last evening. "It was a wonderful trip," said Capt. B. F. Moore this morning. "We were royally treated ever since we left home. We had good tents, sleep in, good cots to use, plenty of blankets and the food was excellent. Anyone who complains of anything does not know what they are talking about."

"There were sixty-five thousand men in the camp, more than they expected but everything went off in ship shape order and it was a grand time. We cheered the old Rebs and they cheered us. We talked for hours with the men we fought fifty years ago and compared notes on the greatest battle ever fought and I tell you it was just fine. Governor McGovern was with us all the time and looked after us and as for Adjutant General Salsman, he is the best fellow I ever met."

The old soldiers from Janesville who attended the reunion were: J. Smith, Benjamin F. Moore, F. J. Smith, Augustus F. Hall, Lucius H. Fox, Alexander F. Lee, Almeron W. Stillwell, Fred S. Winslow, William C. Stevens, and Loring B. F. Winslow. Others from Rock County who attended the gathering were: Beloit—William B. Smith, company H, Third Wisconsin; Charles W. TELEPHONE BUILDING WILL BE ATTRACTIVE

New Structure To Be Erected by Rock County Telephone Company Embodies Most Modern and Approved Ideas.

Dignity and simplicity of design characterize the plans, and permanent and fire-proof construction the specifications of the building to be erected by the Rock County Telephone Company at the corner of Jackson and Dodge streets, just opposite the First Congregational church, the contract for which was recently let to W. R. Hayes, his bid being $9,000. Bids are still to be let for the heating, plumbing, and lighting, painting and glazing, and lighting fixtures. Fifty-two feet in length, and thirty feet in width and two stories in height will be the outside dimensions. With the basement, which is to be high and well lighted, the building will be virtually three stories tall.

The main entrance of the building will be at the corner of Dodge and Jackson streets, the front being on Dodge street. Basement entrances are to be placed in west and south sides. Concrete steps will lead to the front entrance which will be reached by neat brick pilasters and capped by an attractive pediment. This, as well as all the cornices will be of heavy sheet metal painted a stone gray and without sand coat finish. The words "Rock County Telephone Company" will appear over the main entrance in raised metal letters. Brick pilasters are to be placed between the windows extending from the cornice to foundation.

Doors will be practically the only inflammable material in construction. The foundation will be cast in concrete, the exterior walls of Lexington yellow pressed brick lined with hollow tile, and the partition walls of hollow tile. Floors will be composed of hollow tile cast in reinforced concrete, the same type of construction followed in the new Mercy Hospital. They will be coated with a composition that is hard, smooth, waterproof and of pleasing appearance. In the lobby a tile floor will be laid over the concrete. The roof is to be built of asbestos, laid without seam, an innovation in roofing methods in this city. Stairways will be of reinforced concrete, the edges protected by steel.

The general office, secretary and manager's office, superintendent's office, and every passenger. Large reward room are to be situated on the first floor. The general office will be separated from the lobby by a desk extending across the room. A room between the terminal room and stairway will provide storage facilities. The stairways and toilet rooms will open on a roomy hall toward the rear of the building. Relay and cross racks, transfer cables, power board, and machine pier will be housed in the terminal room.

On the second floor of the building will be located the exchange room, occupying the greater portion of the available space, and providing room for the expansion of the switchboards to twice their present capacity. A large lounge room and a rest room for the operators is to be provided in the rear. A hall at the head of the stairs opens on the toilet room, rest room, and exchange room. The basement will contain a large work shop situated in the front end of the rear will be placed a corridor of large proportions opening on the stairway and toilet. A coal bunker will adjoin the boiler room.

The plans for the building were drawn by the firm of Hilton & Sadler of this city and embody the most approved ideas in telephone exchange plant construction with special reference to the needs of the local company. Work will be begun by the contractors at an early date and it is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy before the first of the coming year. The central energy system, similar to that of the Wisconsin Telephone company will be installed.

CHINESE MINISTER TO LEAVE U. S. SOON

Chang Yin Tang.

After a service of three and a half years at Washington, Chang Yin Tang has resigned his post as Chinese minister to this country and will leave soon with his family for China. Chang served a longer term than any of his predecessors. Though appointed by the old imperial government, he aided the republican cause and sought President Wilson to extend formal recognition to the new republic.

NOTORIOUS BANDIT WILL BE RELEASED

"Black Bart" Train Robber, Murderer and Stage Coach Outlaw, Will Be Paroled From Prison Tomorrow.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Marquette Mich., July 8.—"Black Bart" Holzhay, whose criminal career was one of the most spectacular ever recorded in the United States, will be released tomorrow from the Marquette prison, after having served twenty-four years of a life sentence imposed on him in 1889 for murder. His release is made possible by legislation enacted two years ago, which extends the benefits of the parole law to convicts undergoing life sentence.

Holzhay is now 47 years old. When he was received at the prison he was illiterate and possessed a record as a desperado, stage coach and train robber. He gave the prison much trouble during the first few years, but following a surgical operation his character changed completely and he became a model prisoner. He has since been a student and has given himself a good education. For many years he has been the prison librarian and photographer.

Because of his swarthy appearance and ill kept beard Holzhay gained the name of "Black Bart." The bandit, and under that sobriquet he became notorious as the most picturesque criminal in the histories of Wisconsin and Michigan—the terror of two states. His exploits in the woods of northern Michigan rivaled those of Jesse James, the peaceful lumberjack for a long while, he suddenly broke into a series of crimes which continued until the mention of his name struck terror to the hearts of travelers in the north woods. Stages were stopped one, after the other, on their trips between the lumber camps and the town and their passengers held up, the mail sacks rifled and every article of value stolen.

Finding stage coaches too tame, Holzhay took to holding up trains, going through the coaches and robbing every passenger. Large rewards were placed on his head by the government and the railroads, but he was fearless and was not captured. The rewards crew as his depredations continued until they totaled the sum of $2,500. Every man in the woods was watching for him, but when Holzhay lay appeared in their camps and depredations food they feared to lay hands upon him. Holzhay's career of crime continued unmolested, banks, stores, trains, stage coaches and private houses alike falling into his hands and getting out again with less than they possessed before. Finally Holzhay planned to hold up the stage which passed Lake Gogebic, learning that several Chicago bankers, among them A. E. Fleischbein, were to be on board. Fleischbein reached his hand into his pocket, but instead of cash he pulled out a revolver. Before he could shoot the bandit had fired and Fleischbein fell, mortally wounded. A second man tried to resist, but Holzhay shot him also, searched the men and got away.

The authorities of two states took up the pursuit. Trains were watched and stages guarded. But for a long time Holzhay evaded his pursuers. He slept in the woods, only going to villages for necessary food. It was when he went to Republic that the bandit was captured. Village Marshal Glode recognized "Black Bart," and, aided by several men, lured Holzhay to an upstairs room. There all pounced upon the bandit. It took three men to bind the desperado after he had made a fierce fight and attempted to shoot his captors.

In his cell Holzhay was as fearless as he was holding up a train or a coach. On one occasion he stole a table knife, sharpened it on the floor of his cell, and held one of the guards at bay in his cell when he came to take the prisoner to work. Many other times he gave the officials much trouble during the early years of his confinement. Finally the physicians decided that he was insane and he was sent to the asylum at Jonia. There he was operated upon, and then returned to Marquette.

Since the operation Holzhay has been a different man. He has given no trouble whatever. His demeanor has been as gentle as that of a child, and all his time when not at work has been devoted to reading. He is familiar with the history and politics of every nation and has written many essays on sociological and philosophical subjects. He invested the small earnings he had saved in copper stocks and his savings jumped to several thousands, with the help of Vernon Russell who placed his money for him. He is now an expert in the doings of the market. It is believed he has saved enough money to keep him the rest of his days. He probably will go to live with relatives in Wisconsin.

Princess Patricia and Prince Adolf Friedrich.

Seven years ago Princess Patricia, affectionally called Princess "Pat," was reported engaged to Prince Adolf Friedrich, heir to the duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and then promptly denied. Since then she has been reported engaged many times and her name has been linked with King Manuel, Count Turin, Duke Abruzzi, Grand Duke Michel, the Marquis of Anglesy and King Alfonso of Spain. Now it is reported again that her suitor of seven years ago, when she was twenty and he was twenty-seven, has been successful in his siege for the heart and hand of England's fairest princess. This time the report is said to be reliable, coming from the royal house itself.

ATHLETICS RAISE H-L.

For several years it has been suspected that the Athletics somehow or other have been stealing the opposition's battery signals. The Athletics seem able at all times to hit most any kind of pitching and apparently know just what to expect. They have certainly been very successful in lambasting the pellet and whether or not they swipe the signals of the enemy they have benefited by the suspicion. One thing at least helps to throw a little light on the remarkable swatting of the Philadelphia squad. It is that in most cases they are hitting with two balls and no strikes on them and often when it's three to one in their favor. They wait till the pitcher is trying to get the ball over and of course isn't putting much on it. And they don't wait much when the sacks are occupied but wallop at such times and as a result the scores pile up no little.

HIS STOCK'S RISING.

Mat Brock, the young Cleveland featherweight, is being touted as a succeeding mill put in higher in the fight fan's estimation. Y. ring fans.

ONE OF GAME'S MOST FINISHED FIELDERS

Bobby Wallace.

Captain Bobby Wallace of the St. Louis Browns is one of the game's most finished fielders. He is the oldest shortstop in point of service now playing ball, having been a big leaguer about fifteen years. He has a wonderful arm and seldom misses his target. He is also a fair hitter. Read the ads and find out what bargains the merchants have to offer.

HAVE LUCKY DAYS.

Wagner, Wilson and Miller of the Pirates all look forward eagerly to certain dates of the year and month because they know they're going to make a cleaning at the bat when that time arrives. Not that they loaf at the plate in the meanwhile but on their pet days they are sure to pound the pellet immoderately. For the last two years on August 22nd, Hans Wagner has put over seven-count 'em seven—hits on each occasion. Both of these dates were doubleheaders. Among the fourteen hits were five doubles, one triple and two homers. Wilson's favorite date is the 14th of each month. May 14th and June 14th he crooked the bag. Miller's heavy swat day is the 13th of each month. On April 13th he got three bingles off Cheney of the Cubs; on May 13th, he touched up Tom Seaton of the Phillies for a homer and on June 13th got a homer from Rube Marquard.

BLAMES THE SCOUTS.

President Bob Hedges of the St. Louis Browns is heavy on the scout idea. Hedges thinks that a scout has more to do with the building of a ball club than the manager. It's the scout's business, he says, to land the material with which to build a club and a manager can't do anything without something to work with. Scouting, he says, has done as well as could possibly be expected with the material he has had and if he doesn't build up a high class team it's the scout's fault. He has instructed his secretary Branch Ricker to call in the three scouts out for the Browns and take them to one of the Browns play a while Hedges figures his scouts will be better able to understand just the kind of ball players the Browns need. The chances are that this will show them more clearly the kind of players the Browns do NOT need.

POUNDING BALL AT CHAMPIONSHIP CLIP

Amos Strunk.

One of the reasons why the Philadelphia Athletics are setting the pace in the American league is that Connie Mack's outfit is hitting the ball at a championship clip. Six of the Mackerels are now in the 300 hitting division. They are Eddie Collins, Amos Strunk, Dan Murphy, Stuffy McInnis, J. Franklin Baker and Rube Oldring. Strunk has a batting average of .336.

PROMISING YOUNG HURLER WITH BROWNS

Walter Leverenz is a new addition to the pitching staff of the St. Louis American league team and is one of the most promising of the youngsters in the game this season. Although he has lost more games than he has won, this is due to the fact that he has very poor support. St. Louis stands seventh in the American league race.

congress took the matter up and began an investigation. Taking it all in all there are some hard questions for the Wilson cabinet to race and explain to the general public when the time comes.

THE BRIDGE BONDS.

The decided opposition to the bond issue for the construction of the Milwaukee street bridge which developed within the past few weeks, has not been unusual. Some one with an axe to grind has been behind the whole movement and the talk about a steel bridge in place of the proposed concrete construction is merely another move in the same direction. It has been suggested that the present bridge might be repaired and made to do, one of the most absurd propositions to be thought of. A bridge is a necessity and the opposition to the issue of the bonds is merely part of a game on the part of certain elements to discredit the present city officials.

SAVAGE FIGHTING.

There has been savage fighting in the Balkans and loss of lives which will run into the tens of thousands. After pushing to a successful termination the war against Turkey the allies have fallen out like a pack of dogs and are quarrelling over the spoils. It is a case of "dog eat dog" and the result of the conflicts will be hard to estimate just at this time. Meantime Europe sits back and watches the conflict with eager eyes, mindful of its own internal conditions. Austria, Germany, France, Russia and England all are prepared to step in when the time comes for their own personal gain and meanwhile are content to let the Serbs, Greeks and Bulgars fight it out.

It took over a million men to finish the war of the rebellion and one individual can claim having accomplished it any more than any single man can make assertions what he will accomplish if elected mayor.

Thus far July has behaved itself fairly well. Corn is certainly knee-high by the Fourth of July right, and for that we must thank June.

If you have not voted yet remember the polls are open until eight this evening and exercise your right of franchise.

Do not pass over that bond issue lightly. It is a problem that means the economical prosperity of the city.

Virtue has its own reward and congress understands it by trying away at a great rate down in Washington.

The state legislature is again in session so at last something definite can be expected at Madison.

Just at present the visible government in Washington is doing most of the governing.

How he sighs in deep relief,
How he feels a happy thrill
That is most beyond belief.
How he struts across the floor,

How he almost chokes with joy,
When the nurse comes down the hall
And she whispers: "It's a boy."

The Thesaurus.
"A fellow came through here about two months ago selling what he called a thesaurus for one dollar every one while," said Hank Tumms, fell for it, said Uncle Ezra Harkins, "Is that so?" asked the traveling man.

"Yes, replied Uncle Ezra. "Hank bought one and determined to make his fortune out of it. He built a large wrought iron cage in his back yard and put up a highboard fence around it. He said he didn't know how large the cage was and he made the cage plenty big enough for it. Hank claimed as how a thesaurus was a big prehistoric animal and said he would exhibit it at ten cents a throw. He didn't know what he would feed it, but he bought fifteen tons of hay for a starter and put and in the paper that the thesaurus would be on exhibition to the general public. Then everybody got down and waited for the thesaurus to come. Finally the mail man left it. It was a box about the size of a dried herring box and when Hank opened it he found the thesaurus was nothing but a book about the size of a dictionary. And there he had gone and bloomed $15 for the cage and hay and advertising."

"What did he do with the cage?" asked the traveling man.

"Oh, the folks got together and put Hank in the cage and are now exhibiting him as the biggest bonehead in captivity and his family will probably realize quite a neat little sum."

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

A DREAM COME TRUE.

The other day I rode around the Soldiers' home at the national capital. It is in some ways the most beautiful spot in the most beautiful city of the world. At that time I heard the story of the starting of the home. I do not vouch for the historic accuracy of all the details, but repeat the tale in substance as it was told to me.

Prior to the Mexican war General Winfield Scott urged congress to establish a soldiers' home in or near the city of Washington. For reasons of economy congress refused to act on his suggestion.

As a part of the spoils of the Mexican war General Scott brought back in the neighborhood of $100,000, which he deposited in the name of the Soldiers' home. He then said in effect to congress that it could now carry out his plan without cost to the nation and that the money which had been taken as the result of the war could be put to no better use than in creating a harbor of refuge for the nation's defenders. Today the Soldiers' home at Washington is the noblest monument to the memory of General Winfield Scott. It was the home of Lincoln during the civil war. It is intimately associated with the name of General John A. Logan, who was for some time its commandant.

My opinion of General Winfield Scott went up several points as a result of the visit to the Soldiers' home. That is a material embodiment of his ideal.

In some aspects it represents a greater victory than he won in either Canada or Mexico, for it will be a place of refuge for the regular soldiers probably to the remotest days of our history and will keep the name of its author as given as the trees and landscapes that are its ornaments.

Many men have noble dreams for the good of humanity that are never realized. All the more gratifying is it when we see one such vision incarnated and brought into material form.

Washington dreamed the American nation and its capital city. Lincoln dreamed that nation reunited and free. General Scott, a typical soldier, dreamed a home for soldiers. All these dreams have come true and perhaps in a more splendid form than was foreseen by the men to whom were vouchsafed the visions.

We, too, may plan for better things in the days to be. We, too, may have our dreams for human good and happiness. Whether or not we can make them come true, they are yet helpful for no worthy aspiration is ever wholly unfulfilled. No seed of a noble purpose ever falls into the soil of human consciousness that it does not grow, and flower and bear fruit some time and somewhere.

WEATHER FORECAST

DISCOVERY IS MADE

Astronomers Announce New Discovery for Forecasting Seasons.—Will be Great Aid to Farmers.

Astronomical discoveries that scientists say will make it possible to forecast weather conditions a season in advance were announced on Saturday by Prof. E. B. Frost of Yerkes observatory, Williams Bay, Wisconsin. The announcement is the result of ten years' tabulation of observations of the sun.

The records show that the "solar constant" does not exist, as the sun is a variable star, and that solar radiation is indicated by the sun spots which wax and wane in a regular cycle of eleven years. The observations were made, according to Prof. Frost, for the purpose of bringing the science of astronomy to the aid of agriculture in order that farmers may know the advance of planting seasons what crop prospects are.

Variation in solar heat amounting to more than 5 per cent in a week was discovered. Radiation from the sun is high when sun spots are numerous. At present sun spots are few, but in four years it may be expected that a large number will develop according to Prof. Frost.

Astronomical observers are now devoting their chief attention to the observation of sun spots, which experience has shown are the things which most affect all conditions of life on this planet.

What boy's name?

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together. And until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

VERY LIGHT VOTE IS REGISTERED IN CITY

EARLY THIS AFTERNOON FOURTH WAS ONLY WARD SHOWING EVEN FAIR VOTE.

SHOW LITTLE INTEREST

Enemies of Bond Issue Working Hard To Defeat It—Race Close Between Nichols and Nash.

That the average citizen is taking but little interest in the primary today is evidenced by the extremely light vote that is out. The enemies of the bond issue are most diligent and predict the defeat of the proposition. The race between Nichols and Nash for the mayoralty nomination is thought to be very close despite the efforts of both candidates to get out a good vote if possible.

The Fourth Ward was the only one to show any real election spirit and early this afternoon they had two hundred and sixty-eight ballots in with the "third ward" next in line with two hundred and forty-six. The Second ward had one hundred and fifty-two, the First ward one hundred and seventy-eight and the Fifth one hundred and eighty-two.

The polls will remain open until eight this evening and it is possible that many who have not voted yet will do so before that time. It should not take long to count the ballots and they will be displayed in the Gazette windows as fast as received.

The race was at Milwaukee street and at crack of the starter's pistol, both athletes made off in the most approved style. DOMESTIC SCIENCE

TEACHER IS NAMED

Miss Elizabeth Bailey, a Graduate of Stout Institute Elected by Board of Education.

Miss Elizabeth Bailey, a graduate of Stout Institute of Menomonie, Wis., was elected instructor in manual training to succeed Miss Maybelle Cornish, resigned, by the board of education at its regular meeting last evening.

Miss Bailey has been teaching in Minneapolis during the past year and comes with the very best of recommendations.

Buildings recommended by State Inspector Terry will be made at the direction of the board, who tomorrow morning and Friday afternoon will make a tour of inspection of the ten buildings.

The new school will be of a very thorough character and exterior from roof to basement. Additional windows will be cut in the walls of the Washington, Jefferson and Webster schools to remedy defective and insufficient lighting.

At the school they will be so placed as to harmonize with the plans for remodeling, should they ever be carried out.

An appropriation to carry out these plans was voted by the common council at the time it voted funds to build the addition.

Some time was given to the discussion of the problem of overcrowding in the high school. It was generally recognized that a very large new addition building or addition to house the manual training, industrial school and commercial courses would be needed. There are now 430 pupils in the high school, more than are attending Beloit college. There are about 150 in the commercial courses alone which is carried on in very cramped quarters. It may be found that the present quarters and defer the necessity of building for some time.

INSTRUCTOR FINLEY ANNOUNCES OPENING OF PLAYGROUNDS

New Playgrounds on Jefferson and Webster Sites Officially Opened Yesterday—Large Crowd Makes Appearance.

The new playgrounds were opened yesterday about the city. The first day was a great surprise in the number that turned out. Mr. Finley, head of the Jefferson grounds, stated that there were close to ninety-five present on his grounds, while the Webster school site accommodated about ninety-one.

Baseball, basketball and volleyball formed the main attractions for the older children, from twelve to twenty, while the swings, teeters and ladders were interesting also. Several high school boys crowded the grounds last evening, and made good use of the basketball. Mr. Finley is contemplating on forming a high school boys' basketball league, because of the interest shown last night. The teeters were the main attraction for the smaller youngsters, who are yet unable to handle the other apparatus.

Mr. Finley stated yesterday that the grounds are for the use of anyone in the city desirous of recreation. Many of the people had the idea that the grounds were for the use of only those who attended the schools, but Mr. Finley wishes to change this impression if it is the city and not a few individuals who are to enjoy these playgrounds.

The business men will have the privilege of using the playground from six in the evening until dusk. Interest prevails among all of the ages, and some interesting and promising games are to be looked for.

Law, who has charge of the Webster grounds, is confident of the grounds being a success.

This afternoon there was a much larger crowd enjoying these different sports than yesterday. Close on two hundred visited the Jefferson grounds, which is a good increase over the first day's work.

Grounds hostess of about one hundred and fifty present.

Cricket will be taught to all interested in knowing how to play it. Quoits is a coming sport on the grounds, especially among the business men. Several basketball leagues will be formed, as soon as possible, and among which will be the business men's league, young and older girls' league, and high school boys' league. Baseball is interesting among the girls.

Mr. Finley is an athlete, and is ready to instruct any individual concerning any of the games about the grounds. He is anxious to accomplish much before he returns to his school work, and he wishes to see as many in the city turn out during the day as possible.

There Lay the Worry.

"I say, Sambo," asked a man of an improvident negro who had lost a job for the third or fourth time, "aren't you worried over the question of wherewithal to support you?"

"Lordy, Marse Henry," was the reply, "I ain't worryin' 'bout wherewithal, Ise worryin' 'bout de wherefore fur de herein."

A patent recently granted covers a device to demonstrate the superior wearing qualities of one brand of stockings as compared with another. The stockings are mounted on forms properly supported and between the two is a vibrating sledge striking first the toe of one stocking and the heel of another, with a register which records the number of blows on each. It is thought that will not only be a means of testing the wearing qualities of the material, but will be a means of demonstration which will be satisfactory to anyone.

The risk of fire starting from an electric lamp is very remote unless the conditions are very favorable. Some time ago a fire broke out in a theater in a German city, and its origin was attributed to an electric lamp. Some electric light people took the ground that it was impossible for a fire to start from a lamp, as a rigid investigation was made of the charges made against it. It was found that the ordinary carbon filament lamp of 16-candlepower, 220-volt, would ignite cotton or other equally inflammable material if brought into close contact with it and in such a manner to prevent all draft which might carry off the heat. It was impossible to start a fire with incandescent lamps, although it was done with lamps of higher candlepower.

Today's Evansville News

Evansville, July 8.—The Evansville School Board held its annual District School Meeting last evening, and some very important subjects were taken up. Perhaps the most important move made was that of expending twenty thousand dollars on new improvements among the schools.

Among these improvements will include separate eating plants, together with the necessary improvements which will be made. New sanitary applications will be added to the health regulations of the schools, so as to make the rooms as healthy as possible. This bill was recommended by the building committee and by the school board. A bill promoting two new courses in the school, the manual training and agriculture, was voted down by the majority vote. The regular budget was approved as printed.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

CAN YOU TRANSLATE?

ARE YOU good at translating? No, I don't mean translating French or German or any of the vocal languages. What I mean is, are you good at translating the language of life; are you able to translate other people's experiences and emotions into terms of your own experiences and emotions? When you encounter in anyone, a feeling which you cannot understand, do you promptly brand that emotion as unreasonable and incomprehensible, or do you take out the dictionary of your own experience and try to translate it?

For instance, you have a friend who will do anything on earth for you except write to you. When you are together you are the best of comrades, and yet when you are apart your letters to her remain unanswered for weeks. You know she has plenty of time, and her silence is incomprehensible to you, or worse still, only to be explained by the fact that she does not truly prize your friendship. Now, in answer to your reproaches she often says to you, "But you don't know how I hate to write letters. I'd rather do a washing than write a letter." And though you have been obliged to accept that excuse, you have really considered it all nonsense and felt that it merely meant that she was lazy or indifferent. And in the light of the ease with which you, yourself, dash off a letter, it is all nonsense. But instead of looking at it in that light, take your dictionary and translate. Try to think of some little thing which you desperately hate to do. There is some thing like that. You know it. You hate to make a formal call; you'd rather do a washing. Very well, then try to realize that that's the way she feels about writing a letter. No, there's no reason why you should hate to make a formal call; but you hate the one and she, the other, and if you will think hard of the state of mind into which the mere thought of a formal call throws you, I am sure you will be able to forgive her more easily the next time she fails to answer your letter.

There is nothing on earth I hate quite so much as doing up a bundle. When I have to do up a bundle for the mail I often put it off for days, and always, if possible, persuade someone else to do it for me. It is a very silly notion of mine, I know, but I will say for it that it has helped me wonderfully in understanding other people's silly notions.

The art of translation is especially needed between husbands and wives, because the two sexes look at life from such a different angle. Things that seem little to a man often seem big to a woman and vice versa. Love, of course, helps each to indulge the other's viewpoint, but the art of translation helps them to go a lot further—and understand.

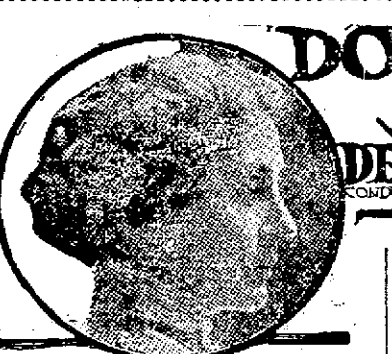

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Summer Warnings For The Housewives.
Don't treasure old rubbish.
Put greasy rags in metal receptacles.
Use only metal waste paper baskets.
Never use gasoline for cleaning in a house.
Keep ashes away from wood.
Shut the doors of a room where a fire starts. Remember that a draft helps a fire along wonderfully.
Have the chimney cleaned twice a year.

Be careful when cleaning the oven. If meat fat catches fire in a gas oven throw in salt instead of water. The salt will put the fire out more quickly and will not spoil the meat.

Cleaner.—A thin coat of polish left on the sink overnight once a week will remove the ugly yellow stains that will not yield to kerosene. It should be applied with care, as it is poisonous.

The Table.
Fried Rib Chops—Wipe the chops and salt them on both sides, dip them in flour, and then in a mixture of one egg or two tablespoons of water, and finally in fine cracker crumbs. Fry in deep fat at a high temperature—high enough to brown a piece of white bread in one minute.

How to Make Coffee.
I am reminded just now of a young housekeeper who only last week begged me to tell her how to make good coffee ALL THE TIME. So I'll take it for granted this is a very good beginning for all young housekeepers and give a few directions.
Material.—Coffee, four tablespoonfuls; white egg, one teaspoonful; cold water, one-quarter cup; boiling water, three cups.
Directions.—A great deal, both of interest and information, might be written about coffee, but it is not wise to take it up here. Always buy the best coffee that can be bought, and that does not always mean the highest priced. Do not always blame the grocer if your coffee is poor; sometimes the poor coffee is the result of a not perfectly clean coffee pot. Once a week put a tablespoonful of baking soda into the pot, partly fill it with water and boil for at least ten minutes. Then wash thoroughly and you will find it sweet and clean.

So there are three necessities for good coffee, first an enamel or granite pot kept perfectly clean, or buy a cheap coffee pot (not tin, but enameled) and have a new one often; second, a good blending of the best coffee, and third, freshly boiled water.
Scald the pot, grind the coffee almost as fine as coarse granulated sugar. Put the egg in cold water, add the coffee and mix well. Pour into the coffee pot and add one cup boiling water and bring quickly to a boiling point.
Now this must be done always, or the coffee is ruined. Set back on the stove where it will keep hot, but not boiling, and add the remaining two cups of boiling water. Let stand two or three minutes, settle with a very little cold water and serve at once with hot milk or occasionally cream.
If coffee is made in a percolator, follow the directions which come with it and good coffee is assured. Coffee is always better, however, when made in large quantities.
Fruit Punch.
Material.—Lemon, two cups; tea infusion, one cup; strawberries or raspberries, two cups; lemons, five; oranges, five; grated pineapple, one; apollinaris, strawberries or cherries.

Directions.—Make a syrup by boiling the sugar and one cup of water together ten minutes. Cool and add all the remaining ingredients, cover and set in a cold place at least half an hour. Strain and add very cold water to make one and one-half gallons; add apollinaris and a cupful of home canned cherries or strawberries. Serve in a punch bowl with a piece of ice. This will serve about forty guests, and any part of these ingredients may be divided for the punch for luncheon.

To Can String Beans.
String and snap the beans; if they are very small they may be canned whole. Pack them tightly into sterilized jars, cover to overflowing with cold water containing a teaspoonful of salt to a quart, place on the rubber and top, but do not press down the spring, and set them on the rack of the steam cooker, leaving a little space between each one. Fill the steamer tank with cold water; close the door and bring slowly to the boiling point, then cook for an hour. Snap down the springs and let the jars remain in the cooker to cool. Remove to a convenient table. Repeat this process on the second and third days, releasing the spring each time, then store in a dark place, as sunlight will bleach the color.

To Can Corn.
In canning corn, do it at once after picking. Strip off the husks, remove the silk by means of a stiff brush and score down the kernels. Add a teaspoonful of salt to each quart of corn, pack it into the sterilized jars, filling them to cover to overflowing with cold water and proceed as with string beans, with this exception: The boiling process should be increased an hour and a half each day, as corn is liable to contain bacteria very resistant to heat.

To Can Peas.
Prepare as for string beans. These may be mixed and canned together if desirable. A sprig of mint to each jar of peas gives a delightful flavor.
Macedoine of Vegetables.
It is a simple matter to prepare a macedoine of "jardiniere" of vegetables at home. Cut equal parts of fresh peas, thin beans, sliced string beans and diced carrots. Pack into the jars, cover with salted water and cook an hour and a half each day, as for corn. These mixed vegetables may be used for julienne soup, for salads or in meat sauces. They are the foundation for the chops "jardiniere," etc., billed in the best hotels.

The Kitchen Cabinet

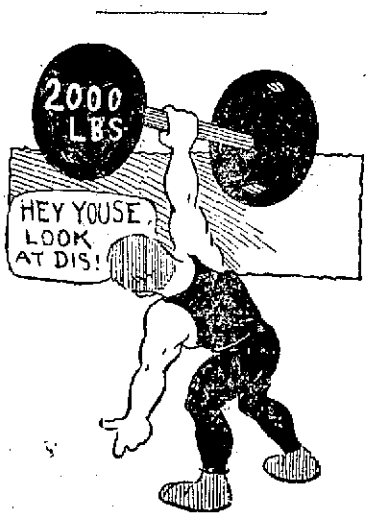

WOULDN'T shape a noble life? Then cast No backward glances toward the past; And though somewhat best and gone, Yet do thou act as one new-born, What each day needs, that shalt thou ask. Each day will set its proper task.

FRESH NEW VEGETABLES.
For those fond of the fresh, crisp cabbage, there is no manner of serving it more acceptable than the following: Shred the cabbage very fine, sprinkle with a dash of salt, sugar and sweet cream, adding enough vinegar to give it the desired snappy flavor. Cabbage, when cooked, should be dropped into boiling water and cooked quickly; boil with the lid off, and it is fresh and green it will keep its color. Drain and press out the water. Serve with butter and vinegar, seasoning with salt and pepper, or add a cream sauce well seasoned.
Cauliflower is a most delicious vegetable, and when well cooked and dressed is truly "cabbage with a college education."
Tomatoes.—The tomato is one of our most delicious vegetables when eaten raw, and it is also most delightful when cooked. To preserve the natural flavor, cut rather thick slices and fry in butter on both sides, season lightly with salt and pepper and serve with a rich cream sauce. Green tomatoes are very good fried, cut in slices without peeling, sprinkle with sugar, roll in flour or corn meal and fry in pure lard. When well browned season and serve as a garnish to meat.

When cooking green peas add a teaspoonful of sugar to the water and a small bunch of mint.
Stewed Lettuce.—This is not a dish sufficiently used to be very common. Wash and cook the vegetable until tender, then dress it with butter, salt and pepper, and serve it with vinegar as greens, or cook it in a double boiler in milk, and when tender add butter and seasonings.
Cucumbers are commonly served in the uncooked state, though they are very palatable when cooked and served with a sauce. Cook them in boiling water until tender, then add a sauce made of butter and flour, well blended, with seasonings of salt, onion juice and pepper.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a young married woman and would like to entertain some friends for an evening, but as we have no music I presume games would be all right. If so, what would you name some and oblige.

(2) What would be daily for a lunch at this little party?

A DAILY READER.
(1) You may find several books of indoor games in any bookstore. I would suggest that you get such a book. Or you would undoubtedly find one or more in the public library which would give you more detail and variety of choice than I can in this limited space.

(2) For hot weather refreshments, make a fruit punch and serve with this dainty sandwiches, such as egg and lettuce, mince coldsage cheese with brown bread, minced chicken with parsley, chopped olives and celery, salmon paste with water-cress. Small frosted cakes and ice cream will finish the lunch. This will do for "lady" refreshments or to serve at a table.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Can you tell me what will remove streaks from plaster where water has run down over it?

I do not know what will take them out, but they can be covered with a coat of calcimine or paint.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will you please tell me what to serve for a wedding breakfast to about thirty people in early July?

(2) What would be an appropriate centerpiece for the table (wedding colors, pink and white)?

AN APPRECIATIVE READER.
(1) Wedding Breakfast:
Fruit Cocktail
Baked Almonds
Salt Wafers

Crab Meat with Cream Dressing

Olive

Broiled Breast of Chicken

Potatoes au Gratin

Asparagus Tips

Lemon Ice

Fancy Cakes

Wedding Cake

Coffee

(2) You might have two large flower hearts, one pink and one white with a golden arrow through both of them. Or you might have suspended over the table a huge wedding bell with ribbons reaching from it to each place attached to a box of the wedding cake.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Please give me a menu for luncheon. How many courses are served at a luncheon? Please give menu for each course.

(2) Please dictate an invitation for some one to attend a luncheon.

FIRST COURSE

Cold Omelette with Whipped Cream

Salt Wafers

SECOND COURSE

Every Day Talks For Every Day People.

everyday talks. . . . The other evening a woman walked out with her little son, not a paragon of virtues by any means, just a wholesome little chap with his own ideas.

They talked of the trees and the birds going to rest. It was one of those purple twilight moments that fairly force one to stay out. The little boy wanted to watch the moon on the water. So they went.

They had been standing at the water's edge some five minutes when the sound of sobs and loud voices reached them. Approaching was a woman and a child—a boy maybe nine—he was crying bitterly. The woman knew each other, had gone to school together. So they stopped and talked. "My boy ran away today, he broke his sister's doll and I told him if he ever broke it I would whip him. He just would not leave it alone."

"It dropped, I never meant to break Rosella; she is such a pretty doll," said the little lad, his quivering face, untaken for sympathy. "Well, it's broken anyway, come on home," snapped the mother. They left.

Her boy longed for a doll—the parent insisted. "Mamma," said the little boy that was watching the moon in the water, "why don't his mother buy him a doll like my Buster?"

"I really can't say why," said his mother. "But why do you ask?"

"Cause if he had his own doll he wouldn't have to play with his sister's."

"He's all mine and I'm his father. I work for him, don't I?"

"Yes," she answered wonderingly. "He was a new character before her; her own boy, her chum, with his paternal ideas."

His love for his old Buster was a known fact.

They slept together until boy was seven. Then he boxed his faithful friend and placed him in the attic. Buster was the very opposite of beauty; plainly good and misshapen.

But it belonged to the attic and so, therefore, belonged silently to his love and protection, bringing out in boy (as all children do in their parents) the desire to do the best he could for his own.

After the boy was in bed that night the mother sat and thought on what her little son had said. Then she decided to have a look at Buster. She might view it with the eyes of her son. She tiptoed to the attic and opened the box. Plunged on Buster's battered breast was a wrinkled, soiled paper on which was laboriously spelled "good boy. Buster. I have to study and not play; when I am a man we will live with each other. Always from Your father—boy."

BRIEF NOTES FROM FASHION'S REALM.
The vogue of the double skirt seems to be increasing.
A new silk crepe has embroidered sprigs of flowers upon it.
Small leghorn hats are being veiled with printed chiffon.
Handbags are like hats and shoes in being as small as possible.
New blouse shops are showing some new blouse suits with pleated petunums.
Decorative sashes and belts are playing a big part in summer fashion.
Bayaders and Roman stripes are to be used this fall for girdles and sashes.
Broche crepes and brocade charmeuse in monochrome colorings are among the fashionable silks.
The latest word from Paris is that tulle has quite displaced chiffon for drapery purposes.
The favorite shoe in Paris is the "costume"—a low shoe laced with ribbons high on the ankle.
Hawthorn, sweet peas, and hedge roses are reported as being in favor in Paris for summer millinery.
One of the prettiest summer frocks seen lately was yellow voile with a white cotton velvet stripe.
Among the attractive automobile seen this summer is one of two thicknesses of chiffon made like a sun-bonnet.
For simple morning costumes many of the coats have martingale straps and lingerie collars and revers, hemstitched and laid on those of the material.
A novelty in parasols has a ferrule end which is an exact reproduction of the top of the Directoire walking sticks carried by the beauties of that period.
Boleros, blazers, Etons, Russian blouse coats and Norfolk jackets—all are seen on the summer suits of linen and cotton, silk and even lace.
A pocket is a feature of many of the new white skirts. Most of the pockets are fastened over one of the hip seams, but a more convenient arrangement is to have it fastened on one side of the front.
Ratone, so much used for summer frocks, can be effectively buttonholed. A frock of ratone needs no other trimming than buttonholed collar and cuffs, buttonholed front closing on waist and skirt and a suede belt.
A dainty finish for net and lace blouses is a banding of tiny roses wrapped in a fold of net to edge the sleeves, neck and fronts of the blouse. The roses should be the little silk ones that are sold by the yard.
A sensible bathing suit for a little girl consists of mohair bloomers and a knitted woolen sweater matching in color. The sweaters worn for bathing are made with sailor collars and worn with a tie. For the smaller child the most comfortable and durable is the knitted woolen bathing suit, made in one piece and buttoned on the shoulders.

"IN WRONG" GIVEN AT MYERS THEATRE

Farce Comedy Pleases Two Small
Audiences at Meyer Opera House
—Held Chorus Girls' Contest.

The two act farce comedy of "In Wrong" pleased the small audience that was present at the two performances at the Myers opera house last evening. There are twenty people in the cast and the company bids fair to hold a successful summer run.

The light plot that runs through "In Wrong" is full of amusing situations and consists of how three husbands get "in bad" with their wives on the finding of a pair of gloves on a private yacht. Eddie DeNoyer as "Silas Simpson" and Billy Murray as "Jack Beaman" were unable to make their wives see how those gloves came on the boat. Clever singing and dancing by a chorus is brought in several times during the comedy and the musical numbers were all enjoyed. Eddie DeNoyer proved himself a comedian above the average, especially during the vaudeville act when he kept the audience in a continual uproar.

An extra feature was staged after the second performance last night in the form of a chorus girls' contest, each girl giving a special act and the favorite was picked by the audience.

I want to tell the tollworn voter about my forty-horse-power motor, the smoothest thing in town; no sooner do I start my spilling than he shows signs of ugly feeling, and wears a gloomy frown. As soon as possible he'll shake me; thus all my former friends forsake me, and dodge me on the street; they all re-

ONE KIND fuse to hear my braggin' OF GRIEF about my gorgeous chug-chug wagon, the car that for hours together about the cheap old jim crow weather, or of the yield of peas; but when they hear my steps approaching, they know that topic I'll be broaching, and climb adjacent trees. They'll take four languages and spend 'em in thrashing out the referendum and things that have no sense; but rather than be cheered with stories about my auto and its glories they'll climb a barbed wire fence. I have the finest petrol bugs that ever yet, with music chuggy, along the road did whizz; and yet it gives me little pleasure, for when I tell of what a treasure the blamed thing really is, my friends don't care, my yarn's rejected; they act as though I were infected with leprosy or mumps; that's why you do not see me grinning my famous grin, so wide and winning; that's why I have the dumps.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

EXTRAVAGANCE.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

EXTRAVAGANCE is a national pastime which consists of buying pleasure and allowing the beneficiary to pay for it with the proceeds of a ton-tine life insurance policy. It is a much superior article to economy, which never permits a man to spend money until he can see some collateral benefit at the other end of it.

Extravagance is an easy habit to get into, and sometimes lasts until a few of the more irascible creditors tie a shorliff's sale around the windmill and convert the back forty into 10 per cent dividends. Many a prosperous citizen has released his hold upon a 150-acre farm in order to gaze fondly upon tangible wealth in the form of stock in a rubber plantation which never grew anything except certificates of hope in four colors.

Nobody can expect to keep in the swim nowadays unless he is supplied with so much extravagance that he can't meet his semi-annual lodge dues without drawing on his salary for month after next. The minute a man tightens up and refuses to invest $600 in an eighteen-hole golf links at the country club, his wife begins to be included among those who were not present at the next. The minute a man can do it is to try to save a little money so as to prevent the family doctor from suing the estate.

It is difficult to understand why the average man will kick about the extravagance of women, and then when his wife blossoms out in a home-made dress which cost 75 cents, including the hooks and eyes, belittle her handiwork and suggest that she trade it to the hired girl for a week's wages. Oftentimes the man who brags that he got along on one collar last week will fly into several kinds of purple hysteria if his wife doesn't come down in an evening gown with mother of pearl trimmings.

If there were less extravagance on the part of these who can afford it, there would be fewer displays of all stockings during business hours by people who are on the pay roll at $5 per week.

Moretown, Vermont.—"I was troubled with pains and irregularities for sixteen years, and was thin, weak and nervous. When I would lie down it would seem as if I was going right down into some dark hole, and the window curtains had faces that would peek out at me, and when I was out of doors it would seem as if something was going to happen. My blood was poor, my circulation was so bad I would be like a dead person at times. I had female weakness badly, my abdomen was sore and I had awful pains.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and they certainly did wonders for me. My troubles disappeared and I am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. W. F. SAWYER, River View Farm, Moretown, Vermont.

Anger Is Not Manly.
Let this truth be present to thee in the excitement of anger—that to be moved by passion is not manly, but that mildness and gentleness, as they are more agreeable to human nature, so also are they more manly, for in the same degree in which a man's mind is nearer to freedom from all passion, in the same degree also is it nearer to strength.—Marcus Aurelius.

THE SECRET OF LONESOME COVE

BY
SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS
Author of
AVERAGE JONES, ETC.

"No, I don't understand," answered Kent very gently. "I know there are things that can't be spoken, not because they are shameful, but because they are sacred. Yet I've got to know about her, Hazel. I have. When I'm gone, sit down and write it out for me, simply and fully, and send it to my hotel as soon as it is done. You can do that, can't you?"

"Yes, I can do that," decided Sedgwick after some consideration.

"Good! Then give me some dinner. And let's forget this grisly thing for a time, and talk of the old days. Whatever became of Harkness, of our class do you know?"

Between them that evening was no further mention of the strange body in Lonesome Cove.

CHAPTER III. My Lady of Mystery.

(Being a single autobiographical chapter from the life of Francis Sedgwick, with editorial comment by Professor Chester Kent.)

"Dear C. K.," Here goes! I met her first on June 22, at three o'clock in the afternoon. Some wonderful cloud effects after a hard rain had brought me out into the open. I had pitched my easel in the hollow, on the Martinsdale Road, so as to get that clump of pine against the sky. There I sat working away with a will, when I heard the drumming of hoofs, and a horse with a girl in the saddle came whizzing round the turn almost upon me. Just there the rain had made a puddle of thick sticky mud, the mud pie variety. As the horse went by at full gallop, a fine, fat, mud pie rose, came through the air, and landed in the middle of my painting. I fairly yelped.

To get it all off was hopeless. However, I went at it, and was cursing over the job when I heard the hoofs coming back, and the rider pulled up close to me.

"I heard you cry out," said a voice, very full and low. "Did I hurt you?"

"I hope not," said I, without looking up.

"Small thanks to you that you didn't!"

My tone silenced her for a moment. Somehow, though, I got the feeling that she was amused more than abashed at my resentment. And her voice was suspiciously meek when she presently spoke again.

"You're an artist, aren't you?"

"No," said I, busily scraping away at my copperplate. "I'm an archaeologist, engaged in exhuming an ancient ruin from a square mile of mud."

She laughed; but in a moment became grave again. "I'm sorry!" she said. "I know I shouldn't come plunging around turns in that reckless way. May I—I should like to—buy your picture?"

"You may not," I replied.

"That isn't quite fair, is it?" she asked. "If I have done damage, I should be allowed to repair it."

"Repair?" said I. "How do you propose to do it? I suppose that you think a picture that can be bought for a hundred dollars can be painted with a hundred-dollar bill?"

"No, I'm not altogether a Philistine," she said, and I looked up at her for the first time. Her face—(Editorial comment by Kent: I know her face from the sketches. Why the devil don't you describe the horse? However, there's one point clear: she is a woman of means.)

She said, "I don't wonder you're cross. And I'm truly sorry. Is it quite ruined?"

At that I recovered some decency or forbore to say, "I suppose that you think a picture that can be bought for a hundred dollars can be painted with a hundred-dollar bill?"

"No, I'm not altogether a Philistine," she said, and I looked up at her for the first time. Her face—(Editorial comment by Kent: I know her face from the sketches. Why the devil don't you describe the horse? However, there's one point clear: she is a woman of means.)

"Oh!" she said. "I should so like to see your prints!"

"Nothing easier," said I. "My shack is just over the hill."

"And there is a Mrs.—" her eyes suggested that I fill the blank.

"Sedgwick?" I finished. "No. There is no one but my aged and highly respectable Chinaman to play propriety. But in the case of a studio, the conveniences are not so rigid, and the artist may look at pictures unchaperoned."

"I'm afraid I wouldn't do," she answered, smiling. "No, I'll have to wait until—"

A shadow passed over her face. "I'm afraid I'll have to give it up."

Chance settled that point then and there. As she finished, she was in my arms. The girl had loosened, and the saddle had turned with her, and had barely time to twist her foot from the stirrup when the brute of a horse bolted. As it was, her ankle got a bit of a wrench. She turned quite white, and cried out a little. In a moment she was herself again.

"King Cole has been acting badly all day," she said. "I shall have a fine time catching him." She limped forward a few steps.

"Here, that won't do!" said I. "Let me—"

"You couldn't get near him—though, perhaps, if you had some salt—"

"I can get some at my place," said I, gathering up my things. "Your horse is head that way. You'd better come along and rest there while Ching Lung and I round up your mount."

(Comment by C. K.: Here follows more talk, showing how young people imperceptibly and unconsciously cement acquaintances, but not one word upon the vital point of how far the horse seemed to have come, whether he was ridden out, or fresh, etc.)

At the bungalow I called Ching, and we set out with supply of salt. King Cole (comment by C. K.: Probably a dead-black horse) was coy for a time, before he succumbed to temptation. On my return I found my visitor in the studio. She had seen that she knew a little about pictures. She knew more than a little, a good deal, in fact, and talked most intelligently about them. I don't say this simply because she tried before she went to buy some of mine. When I declined to sell she seemed put out.

"But surely these prints of yours aren't the work of an amateur," she said.

"Oh, yes, I sell—when I can. But I don't sell without a good bit of bargaining; particularly when I suspect my purchaser of wishing to make amends by a purchase."

"It isn't that at all," she said earnestly. "I want the pictures for myself."

"Call this a preliminary then, and come back when you have more time."

She shook her head and there was a shadow over the brightness of her face. "I'm afraid not," she said. "But I have enjoyed talking again with some one who knows and loves the best. After that, after that, I added with a note of determination almost of defiance, 'there is no reason why I shouldn't sometime.'"

"Then I may look for you again," I asked.

She nodded as she moved out across the porch. "If you'll promise to sell me any print I may choose. Good-by. And thank you so much, Mr. Sedgwick. And thank you so much, Mr. Sedgwick."

She held out her hand. It was a hand for a sculptor to model, as beautiful and full of character as her face. (Comment by C. K.: Bosh!) Afterward I remembered that never in our friendship did I see it ungloved. (Comment by C. K.: Bosh!) A severe observation in that!

"An revoir, then," I said; "but you have the advantage of me, you see. I don't know what to call you at all."

She hesitated, then, with a little soft quiver of her eyelids, which I afterward learned to identify as an evidence of amusement, said, "Daw is a nice name, don't you think?" (Comment by C. K.: Fine, but not a name; but highly probable first name is Marjorie.) "By the way, what time is it?"

"Quarter of five, Miss Daw."

She smiled at the clock. King Cole will have to do his best. If I can't get back for dinner. Good-by." (Comment by C. K.: Good! The place where she is staying is a good way off, assuming a seven-thirty dinner-hour, say twelve miles.)

That was the first of many visits, of days that grew in radiance for me. It isn't necessary for me to tell you, Kent, how in our talks I came to know her face, spirit, and heart, and how she came to know mine. I don't want to tell a story from me; yet that is what it was for me almost from the first. Not openly, though. There was that about her which held me at arms' length; the mystery, the half-revealed, given trust in me, a certain strained look that came into her face, like the startled attention of a wild thing poised for flight, whenever I touched upon the personal note. Not that I ever questioned her. That I was the understanding between us; that I should leave to her her incognito without effort to penetrate it.

While I talked, I sketched her and studied her. Young as she seemed, she had been much about the world, knew her Europe, had met and talked with men of many pursuits, and had taken from all sources tribute for her mind and color for her imagination. She had a certain air of mystery, and an individual habit of thought combined with all her cosmopolitanism was a quaint and profound purity of standards. I remember her saying once—(Editorial comment by Kent: I missed something of her tender and beautiful coloring, I at least caught the ineffable wistfulness of her expression, the look of one hoping against hope for an unconfessed happiness. Probably I had put more of myself into it than she meant. A man is likely to when he paints with his heart as well as his brain and hand. When it was done I made those sketches for it, and lettered on the frame this line:—

"And her eyes dreamed against a distant goal."

It was the next day that she read the line. I saw the color go from her face and flood back again. "Why did you set that line there?" she breathed, her eyes fixed on me with a strange expression. (Comment by C. K.: Rossetti again. The dead woman of the beach quoted 'The House of Life' also.)

"Why not?" I asked. "It seems to express something in you which I have tried to embody in the picture. Don't you like it?"

She repeated the line softly, making pure music of it. "I love it," she said.

At that, I spoke as it is given to a man to speak to one woman in the world when he has found her. She listened with her eyes on the pictured face. But when I said to her, "You have all my heart, and whose name, even I have not—there's no word for me," she rose and threw out her hands in a gesture that sent a chill through me.

"Oh, no! No!" she cried vehemently. "You're expecting good-by. Oh, why did you speak?"

I stood and watched her go. At the end of the garden walk she stooped and picked a rose with her gloved fingers, and as she disappeared, the thicket at the top of the hill I thought she half turned to look. That was five interminable days ago. I have not seen her since. I feel it is her will that I shall never see her again. And I must you understand, Kent, you must find her!

I forgot to tell you that when I was sketching her I asked if she could bring something pink to wear, preferably coral. She came the next time with a string of the most beautiful rose-topazes I have ever seen, set in a most curious old gold design. It was that necklace and none other that the woman by the bull's head, half concealed, when she came here.

"Today—it is yesterday really, since I am finishing this a three a. m.—the messenger boy brought me a telegram. It was from my love. It had been sent from Boston, and it read:—

"Destroy the picture, for my sake. It tells too much of both of us."

The message was unsigned. I have destroyed the picture. Help me! P. S.

CHAPTER IV.
An Inquiry.

"Ah! I'm running a stranger's Rest here!" Frances Sedgwick asked of himself when he emerged upon his porch the morning after Kent's visit. The occasion of this query was a man stretched flat on the lawn, with his head against the stone wall, and his feet pointing toward the sky. He was achieving the somewhat delicate feat of smoking a long, thin clay pipe. Except for this peculiar touch he was of the most unimpeachable elegance. His white serge suit was freshly pressed. His lavender silk hose, descending without a wrinkle under his buckskin shoes, showed a pair of ankles as white and smooth as the rest of his body. A hat covered his eyes, and the sun glared, to a point to this foppishness, a narrow silken ribbon, also pure white, depending from his lapel buttonhole suggested an eye-glass in his pocket.

Sedgwick, who had risen late, having returned to his house at daybreak after delivering his manuscript at Kent's hotel, regarded this sartorial marvel with a doubt as to whether it might not be a figment of latent dreams. Making a detour across the grass, he attained to a side view of the interloper's face. It repaid the trouble. It was a remarkable face, both in contour and in coloring. From chin to cheek, the skin was white, with a tint of blue showing beneath; but the central parts of the face were bronzed. The eyebrows were high and bony. The cheekbones were high and firm; the nose solid, set like a rock.

At the sound of a footstep, the man pushed his hat downward, revealing a nobly forehead and half-closed eyes in which there was a touch of somberness, of brooding. The artist remembered having seen that type of physiognomy on the Venetian coins of the sixteenth century, the likenesses in which the most famous of iron and gold—scholars, rulers and poets. The eyes of the still face opened wide, and fixed themselves on Sedgwick, and the expression of melancholy vanished.

"Good morning," said the artist, and then all but recoiled from the voice that replied, so harsh and raucous it was.

"You rise late," said I.

"I hear your opinion on it," retorted Sedgwick, with a look that led me to infer that you have been waiting for me."

"You wouldn't go far wrong."

"And what can I do for you—before you leave," said Sedgwick significantly.

"Take a little walk with me presently," said the man in another voice, brushing the hat clear of his face.

"Well, you appear surprised. What kind of artist are you, not to recognize a man simply because he shaves his beard and affects a false voice?"

"Disguise?" returned the other, astonished in his turn. "I'm not in disguise."

"Your clothes. They're—well, except for being offensive, I'd call them forlorn."

"Not at all!" protested the other warmly. "Just because I'm a scientific man, is it to be assumed that I ought to be a tramp? I'm fond of clothes; I wear good clothes. It's a hobby of mine; but I deny that it is a weakness."

"Of course not," assented the other, somewhat amused. "By the way, though, your socks and tie don't match."

"They do, absolutely," replied the other with asperity.

"In matching smooth silk with ribbed silk, you should get the latter one shade lighter."

"That so?" said Kent, with interest. "You've told me something I never knew. I'll remember that, Now I'll trouble you to tell me some more things."

"While taking that walk you spoke of."

"That comes later. I've read your story."

"Already?"

"Already? Do you know it's ten o'clock? However, it's a good story."

"Thank you."

"As a story. As information, it leaves out most of the important points."

"You're welcome. Color, size, and trappings of the horse."

"I didn't notice particularly. Black, I think; yes, certainly, black. Rather a large horse. That's all I can tell you."

"Humph! Color, size, and trappings of the rider?"

"Reddish brown hair with a gloss like a butterfly's wing," said the artist, enthusiastically. "Deep hazel eyes; clear sun-browned skin; tall—I should say quite tall—but so—so feminine that you wouldn't realize her tallness. She was dressed in a light brown riding costume, with a toque and very simple tan gaiters and tan boots; that is, the first time I saw her. The next time—"

"Hold on! A dressmaker's catalogue no good to me. I couldn't remember it all. Was she in riding clothes on any of her later visits?"

"No."

"Any scars or marks?"

"Certainly not!"

Varied Weights in Use.

Gems, the most precious of earth's productions, have been weighed from time immemorial with uncertain and varying weights. The first gem weights of which we have records were seeds of uniform size from the fruit of the Kuar or coral tree and from the fruit of the carob or locust tree, which were used in Africa for weighing gold and later in the east for weighing diamonds.
